Pacific Oaks College: From self-discovery to transformation

Recently, we asked several of our students, alumni, and faculty what Pacific Oaks College means to them. It was clear from their answers that they feel a part of a community dedicated to making a significant change in the world around them.

Join Irene with special guests Dr. Eshela Williams Psy.D. for a robust discussion on the words we use while navigating our children's journeys.

Eshela Williams has conducted extensive research, has written and trains on the Impact of Fostering on Birth Children, Previously Adopted Children and Kinship Children of Foster, Kinship, and Adoptive Parents. Her personal history, research, and studies have informed the body of information. Dr. Williams brings a unique perspective as the birth child of kinship, foster, and adoptive parents for almost 30 years and having been raised for a portion of her life by her grandmother in informal kinship care. In addition, she has written children's books that help parents initiate and explore conversations with their birth children in the preparation for the families' foster care, kinship and adoption experience. She is a dedicated and passionate advocate for children and families and through her work, she creates a lasting impact that encourages people to look at the pertinent issues that face children and families impacted by foster care, adoption, and kinship care.
